GERMANS SHIFTING KEEPING ATTACK EAST

Endeavoring to Squeeze French out of Fortress

TEUTONS TAKE TWO VILLAGES

Secure Possession of Manuelles and Champton, Eleven Miles Southeast of Verdun.

London, Feb. 29 .- Suddenly shifting their attack to the east the Germans are making a desperate effort to squeeze the French out of Verdun. The Berlin war office announces the capture of the village of Manuelles and Champton, 11 miles southeast of Verdun with 17,000 French prisoners. The French war office admits the capture of Manuelles but declares that the Germans have lost 45,000 killed in the recent fighting.

London, Feb. 28.-Latest reports from the Verdun district where the big battle has been raging for a week indicate that the German attack has shifted to the east and southeast of Heavy artillery fighting continues on the east bank of the Meuse, where according to the German statement today, the French forces have been driven entirely out of the Meuse peninsula formed by a loop in the river just north of the Verdun forts. West of the Meuse the enemy's bombardment has decreased while along the railway running south through Eix and Fresnes (between Verden and Etain), a new attack has developed with some success, according to German reports.

Some twenty miles west of Verdun. in the Champagne district, the Gerans began an attack last night which mined for them a mile of French front north of Souain and about 1,009 prisoners. An offensive in this region when considered in conjunction with dun, seems to indicate Count von Ha zeler has given up a frontial attack on the Verdun fortress and instead is endeavoring to break the French line both east and west of it in order to turn the position.

This is the same plan as used by the Germans in their advance on Paris before the battle of the Marne and which did not then succeed particularly be cause of the strong French defensive. known as Cotes Lorraines, on the heights east of the Meuse. The situation at Fort Douanmont which has been obscure owing to the conflicting statements from Berlin and Paris, is made clear by the French afternoon communique which says the fort is closely encircled, meaning, of course, that it is held by the Germane.

The village of Dauaumont, however, which lies north of the fort, is in the hands of the French, and this indicates the German troops who stormed the fort are surrounded. The French communique says the Germans made several unsuccessful attempts to drive them from the village

West of Douaumont the Germans report progress in the direction of the towns of Vacherauville and Bras south of Cote de Peivre, which is held by the French. In this neighborhood the French war office tonight tells of severe hand-to-hand fighting with the repulse of a small force of the enem; who had succeeded in gaining a foothold in a redoubt.

CLEAN

Softling the Loose Paper and Rubbish Problem,

CHILDREN AS CIVIC GUARDS

Public School Pupils Should Be Taught to Guard the Trees and Flowers of Park and Street and Should Form Habit of Keeping Surroundings Neat and Clean.

By CLINTON ROGERS WOODRUFF, "Please pick up that newspaper you have just thrown away," said one man to another at Jackson and Biddle streets, in Milwaukee, one morning. "Why?"

"If you don't pick it up I will."

The man who had tossed his morning paper into the gutter near the courthouse thought a moment and then retrieved the tightly twisted paper from the street. He thought a moment and then put it in his pocket.

"Again I ask why you made this request," he said.

"I ask it of you as one citizen has a right to ask of another citizen of our city," was the response. "Have you not seen the articles in the newspapers about this being the first of three cleaning days?"

The man who had tossed his paper in the street admitted that he had, but declared that he thought one more newspaper added to the thousands blowing around the streets would make but little difference. Then the man who had requested that the paper be picked up introduced himself us the health commissioner of the city. The two men shook hands, and the commissioner obtained a warm ally in the "clean city" movement.

"Wednesday is to be children's day," said he, according to the report in a local paper. "With the aid of the dildren we will attack the loose paper problem and make that a special issue on Wednesday. Through the pupils the heavy German attacks east of Ver of the schools we hope to gather up every bit of loose paper flying around the streets and end its power of doing damage to the health and beauty of our city. "When we have the city thoroughly cleaned we must all assist constantly in keeping it clean. Papers and rubbish must not be tossed into the air to be blown into our neighbor's yard, because the next change of wind may not only give back to us all the old stuff we have thrown away, but much more for good measure." If, however, the health commissioner had stopped with his plans for a "clean up day" he would have done a piece of work of only moderate, very moderate, importance, for spasmodic efforts at cleanliness are soon over and soon forgotten. It is the habit of cleanliness that counts, and it is this which farseeing social workers are trying to inculcate. Carol Aronovici, formerly director of the bureau of social research of Rnode Island and now secretary of the Philadelphia Suburban Housing association, with the co-operation of the state department of education, has sought to accomplish this end through the organization of the school children as "civic guards." It is the legal duty of the teacher to instruct pupils in moral conduct. This is the idea at the basis of the effort. as described by the Philadelphia commissioner of public schools, Walter E Ranger, and in his judgment to no oth er instruction are they more responsive. As a practical example of such training, children may well be taught to help guard the trees and flowers of park and street and keep places clean for the sake of public health and beauty. It is in such service that the school may be accounted a civic guard In all activities of the school it should be remembered that the school is already organized for public service. Each school is a unit of a town or city system and a part of a civic institu tion. It cannot be made a subordinate part of any private organization, however beneficent. It owes its first allegiance to city, state and nation. As every resident is a citizen of his town or city, so every pupil, as citizen of ais school, is entitled to an equality of opportunity in the life of the school. For these reasons the formation of clubs and societies among pupils, not lirectly by the school and tending to lisorganize the school itself, seems unnecessary. Let the school, as a whole, assume its civic duties, co-operate with other public agencies and let every pupil share in its civic aims. For special ends the school will properly have its groups or committees of pupils, but they will serve in the name of the

PERISHED WHEN MALOJA SANK

British Press Assumes That Liner Was Destroyed By German

Mine.

London, Feb. 28 .- One of the swarm of rescue vessels scouring the sea off Dover for survivors of the Peninsular and Oriental liner Malo- Russian troops is marching toward the ja, sunk by a mine midway between port of Damy in Manchuria, where Folkestone and Dover yesterday morn ing, late last night happened upon a paby, warmly clad, complacently floating on its back amid the icy waters of the channel. Many hours of exposure had left the child unharmed and arter it had been warmed in the engine room it smiled smugly at its rescuers.

The official death list of the Maloja disaster tonight was 151, including lifty-five passengers. There was a total of 411 persons aboard the liner Only 260 are known to have been saved. Out of the total of 119 passengers which included nineteen children,

The British press is almost unanimcus in assuming that the Maloja and the other vessels struck by mines dur ing the week end were victims of a fresh sowing of German mines. There is much speculation as to how these mines could have been laid. The theory most frequently advanced is that a certain class of neutral shipping was employed.

GARDEN CITIES

Workingmen's Homes That Are Economical and Sanitary.

SIMPLE AND ATTRACTIVE.

England, While Also the Idea Has Been Taken Up In Germany and Elsewhere-Rents Are Low and Ownerships Encouraged.

[By Frank Koesier, consulting engineer, New York; author of "Modern City Planning and Maintenance."]

The garden city in its best form is a well organized development, in which from 100 to 500 homes make up a unit, which is intended to grow little if any larger. When additional demand springs up for quarters a new garden city is formed elsewhere, and thus the identity of the existing one is preserved indefinitely, and the residents, in the expectation of spending their lives in their own homes, have every incentive to embellish them and keep their grounds in the best possible condition.

The garden city in plan should be taid out in the simplest, yet most attractive manner. There being no traffic of any consequence the streets should be planned with the degree of irregularity which insures charm. Some of the streets should be winding, while the straight ones should have suitable terminals. Each house should be provided with a spacious garden, as it is from the gardens that such cities take their name. Such gardens, though partially devoted to vegetable raising, should also be well laid out with flower beds, and the whole garden city should be subject to such regulations as will insure sufficient atten tion being given to the gardens to produce the intended appearance. Grass plots, trees, hedges, shrubbery and arbors should be in abundance both in the front and in the rear of the houses The neglect of the residents should not be allowed to mar the appearance of the city. The houses may be quite simple and compact in design, but they should all be individual in character and by no means the frightful rows of boxes, all exactly alike, which are put up for workmen's houses in most rural or suburban places devoted to such pur

The economical design of the build ings and the small expenses for streets make the housing cost small, so that the rent may be low or the workman may in a reasonable length of time become the owner of his own home. Garden cities should be laid out with in easy reach of transit facilities, and natural advantages of site should be seized whenever possible to give individuality and charm to the plan.

the most necessary character being provided. A school may be the only building of a public character. In garden cities, however, which are larger and located in a more or less isolated position the suburban character is lost, and they become small cities and should be accordingly pro vided with a great number and vari ety of stores and public buildings. The city may have its own civic organization, with schools, a library, like, and be a complete civic unit. Garden cities have met with greater success in England than anywhere else as yet, although a greater number and variety of them are now in process of formation in Germany.
